NEW PICTURE

THERE have been many changes in the international picture in many parts of the world in the postwar years. Some have had worldwide repercussions; some have not.

Among the latter is the new and startling situation in Latin America. Once the United States was unopposed here for generations; today, it is questionable if the Monroe Doctrine exists.

It was not so long ago that if any foreign power encroached upon the independence of any American State, this would not only have been regarded as being dangerous to the safety of the United States but Washington would have moved promptly.

Today, the picture is a very different one. Cuba has shown that. No matter what kind of label Dr Castro ties to his revolution, it is, in fact, a Communist set-up right on the United States' doorstep.

TODAY Cubans have lost the right of self-government. They have lost it to a foreign ideology. They cannot "shape for themselves their own political future and destiny"—the new regime has sneered at the thought even of elections—and it is international communism that is becoming more and more entrenched in the country.

And what can the United States do about it?

Another ugly crisis in Latin America is that in the Dominican Republic. None can foresee the eventual outcome of this situation though it could develop into another Cuba.

The Trujillo regime was similar to that of Batista in Cuba (which Castro overthrew). It was ruthless and brutal, even by Latin American standards, but it could develop, as Cuba has done, into a situation which could gravely affect the security of the United States, and the last state may be worse than the first.

THAT communism will sit by and ignore the possibilities in Dominica is doubtful. Communism thrives where a dictatorship has been removed suddenly, and a vacuum exists. Cuba was a case in point. Will Dominica be another Cuba?

The Monroe Doctrine has been invoked by the United States on several occasions—and successfully—but it is safe to say that never before has the threat to the Doctrine been so menacing as it is today.

CAN the United States intervene in any Latin American country? The last time it did so was in 1954, when it staged the overthrow of a left-wing government in Guatemala. After Cuba, however, can anyone seriously suggest that Washington can act in similar fashion again?

It is safe to say, we think, that the "Send in the Marines" days are over. Military intervention can be a remedy worse than the disease.

Communism—and postwar history has shown this—cannot be halted by enunciating doctrines. The only way to defeat it is by raising living standards and introducing genuine democracy. And this applies to Latin America as well as to the rest of the world.

Freighter Tian Shyang goes down in Formosa Straits SEAS SWAMP HK-BOUND SHIP

31 members of crew dead in disaster

Giant waves whipped up by stormy weather in the Formosa Straits on Sunday sent the Hongkong-bound Nationalist Chinese freighter, Tian Shyang, to the bottom of the sea carrying 31 persons to their deaths.

The disaster was reported to the China Mail by the Hongkong office of the Central News Agency, quoting one of the two survivors of the ill-fated ship picked up from the sea at noon yesterday by the ship, Kwong Ping, on her way from Hongkong to Kaohsiung.

Lee Ming-ming, one survivor, reportedly said that the motor vessel capsized at about 11 pm on Sunday, 11 hours after her departure from the southern Taiwan port of Kaohsiung.

The report put the scene of the accident about 50 nautical miles off Kinhshung—somewhere near the Pescadores.

Died

It was reported by the Chinese press in Hongkong that one of the two survivors died shortly after the rescue.

The ship was insured by its owners in Taiwan for over HK$1 million.

There were rumours yesterday that the ship and crew had defected over to the Communist China midway on their voyage.

An extensive air-sea search for the vessel by the Nationalist Chinese Air Force and Navy, launched two days ago, has been called off.

There were no more rallies according to a reliable source.

The refugees in Rennie's Mill yesterday protested against a Government plan to convert the camp into a resettlement area.

Soviet memo on Berlin, N-tests given Kennedy

Washington, June 7.

Soviet memoranda on Berlin and nuclear testing were handed to President Kennedy in Vienna last Sunday, the White House said tonight.

The President's Press Secretary, Mr Pierre Salinger, declined to discuss the substance of the two documents.

There were reports from Berlin that the paper on the Berlin issue reiterated Soviet determination to conclude a

BATHTUB AND WATER SKI BIDS TO BEAT CHANNEL FAIL

Dover, June 7.

The English Channel on Wednesday defeated two men who tried to cross it in a motor-driven bathtub and another who tried to walk across on water skis.

The bathtub kept going for five hours and got 4 miles out from the shore. At the point students Alan Witt, 21, and John Rose, 19, decided the sea was too choppy and turned back.

The water skier was Alex Wosniak, a 40-year-old Pole living in Britain. He gave up after two hours and six miles. It made his fourth unsuccessful try in two years.—AP.

EUROPEAN INDUSTRY WANTS TO JOIN WORLD TEXTILE TALKS

Berlin, June 7.

The International Textile Processing Association, in a two-day congress which ended today, decided to apply for participation in the world textile conference President Kennedy called last month.

A press conference was told today that 100 delegates from Austria, Belgium, Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, the Netherlands and Switzerland attended the two-day congress.

The international conference is expected to meet in the United States within the coming three months.

DESIRE

Its main problems would be to try to reconcile the desire of wishing to help developing countries with a protection of national textiles industries in Europe and the United States against dumping from Hongkong and other Asian countries.

The congress in Berlin also discussed these problems.

The press conference was told that competition for European textile producers came especially from Hongkong, Japan and other Asian countries with "extremely low wages" and from East bloc countries with "politically directed prices".

The congress was unanimous in demanding that there must not be any tariff discrimination and that import duties in member countries "should be harmonised."

The congress represented an industry employing 250,000 people in Europe with an annual textile processing production of 5,000 million Marks.

It was told that 100 in Europe was a prosperous year for the textile industry with Belgium, France and Switzerland registering a more than eight per cent production rise; Italy, Austria and West Germany between six and eight per cent and only Britain with a relatively small increase of two per cent.—Reuter and AFP.

Two women found dead in wood

Jacksonville, June 8.

The partially-stripped bodies of two Georgia women have been found in a wooded area here.

Mrs Patricia Ann Hewett, 25, mother of four, and Mrs Althea Ottavio, 43, had been missing since May 29 when they drove from their home in Valdosta, Georgia, to Jacksonville to make a bet on dog races that Mrs Ottavio had dreamed about.

Duval County investigators tentatively listed strangulation and asphyxia death for both women, but the bodies were so badly decomposed that a definite cause must await completion of autopsies.

The 274-ton Red Crusader, of Aberdeen, was shelled by the Danish freighter Niels Ebbexhi when she tried to escape after the Danes had put seven men aboard her to arrest her for alleged fishing inside Faroes territorial limits.—Reuter.

Teenagers' long wait for a glimpse of Royal wedding

York, June 8.

Dozens of teenaged girls spent the night on the pavement here to ensure a close-up view of arrivals for today's Royal wedding.

Early this morning 14 hours before the wedding, about 50 girls were camped outside York Minster.

In this great mediaeval cathedral the Duke of Kent, 25, eighth in line to the British Throne, is to marry Miss Katharine Worsley, 28, attractive daughter of a Yorkshire land owner.

TRANSITION

Miss Worsley makes the dizzying transition from "Miss" to "Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent," in the presence of Queen Elizabeth, the bridegroom's first cousin, other members of the British Royal Family, and numerous foreign Royal guests.

All the royal guests, except the Kent family and Princess Anne, 10, Queen Elizabeth's daughter, who is a bridesmaid, are travelling from London to the royal train.

They are to drive from the station to the Minster through banner-hung and flower-decorated streets, past the pavement squatters and 1,200 people who have paid up to £5 for grandstand seats.

A fleet of 17 luxury coaches is to ferry 500 other wedding guests from the station, while about 1,500 are coming by road.

An estimated 25 million people in Britain, France, Holland and Belgium are to watch the ceremony on television, and tele-

BY AIR

The newly-weds are to leave by air this evening from Linton, Yorkshire, to spend the first part of their honeymoon at Birkhall, Queen Elizabeth's Scottish holiday home near Balmoral Castle, and are flying to Majorca later this month.

Wall Street stocks decline

New York, June 7.
The stock market today continued its lower trend on reduced turnover. Prices were easy for most of the day, but a final burst of selling put most groups firmly in the minus column. Some electronics, tobaccos and national defence stocks managed to go against the trend.

Working against higher prices today were reports of Communist victories in Laos. Zenith dropped more than six points in the electronics. Steel leases ran to more than two in Youngstown Sheet. Universal match dropped well over two. Magnavox around two, and Beckman more than three.

Du Pont was a firm spot in the blue chips but Eastman Kodak, Woolworth and other leaders slipped a point or so.

Ford, Chrysler and General Motors finished fractionally on the up wing while Texas Instruments, Minnesota Mining, Addressograph, Schering, and Boeing were higher.

Renewed attacks by Communist rebels U.S. WARNS RUSSIA ON LAOS

WE WERE IN PADONG
BEFORE THE CEASEFIRE
—PATHET LAO

Peking, June 7.
The pro-Communist Laotian Pathet Lao asserted today that their own and neutralist forces had held Padong since May 3—date of the Laotian ceasefire.

This statement was a comment on reports that troops of the pro-Western Vientiane government had yesterday been driven out of this important strategic hold in the south of the Plain of Jars.

BROADCAST

The Pathet Lao radio, in a broadcast reported by the New China News Agency, said that since May 3 Padong and its outskirts had been occupied by forces of Prince Souvanna Phouma's neutralist government and Pathet Lao commandos.

It said that since the ceasefire, Padong had been invaded by "bandits" who "terrorized" members of the local Muo tribe.

While "American imperialists" were attempting to raise "the Padong question" at Geneva, said the broadcast, "American soldiers and bandits" were being parachuted into the south-west province of Xiang Khuang.

"The local population, organized into militia and defence groups, asked the forces of the government and the New Lao Hukat (political arm of the Pathet Lao) for protection, and those forces went to their defence."—AFP.

Violations of ceasefire halts the talks

Geneva, June 7.
The United States today warned the Soviet Union that it takes a "serious view" of the renewed ceasefire violations in Laos by the Communist-backed rebel forces.

The warning was carried personally to Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, Mr Gagarin, by U.S. delegate, Mr W. Averell Harriman, only a short time after reports of the new ceasefire violations caused the conference to recess indefinitely.

A spokesman for the U.S. delegation said that Mr Harriman called on Mr Pushkin to "inform him of the serious view the U.S. government takes of the latest deliberate attack by the Pathet Lao on Royal Laotian government forces in the Padong area in violation of the ceasefire."

Mr Harriman spent "about 15 minutes" at the Soviet delegation villa, the U.S. spokesman said.

Rare

Mr Harriman's trip marked one of the rare occasions here where a top-ranking American diplomat has directly contacted his Soviet opposite number outside the conference room.

The conference recess came after the Communist-backed violations drowned out Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's summit pledge for a ceasefire in the South-east Asian kingdom.

Meanwhile, Western delegations were asking their home governments for orders. British, American and French delegation leaders were meeting to work out common diplomatic strategy.

The British and the Soviet co-chairmen were keeping in touch and may meet tomorrow, a British spokesman said.

But both British and American spokesman said the real issue of the recess is that a U.S. delegation statement labelled the "serious fighting and the blatant violation of the ceasefire in Laos" by Communist-backed rebel forces.

There was no indication when the next session might be held. Two weeks ago the conference went into a week's recess after the Communists refused to strengthen the truce commission.

Sirion Champassak, spokesman for the Western-backed Royal Laotian government, told a news conference he will make a "protest to the conference co-chairmen tomorrow about the ceasefire violations" by the Communist-supported forces.

'EMINENTLY SATISFIED' WITH CLIMB

Katmandu, June 7.
Manchester mountaineer Joe Walmsley and his expedition, which conquered the previously unclimbed 25,680-foot Nuptse Peak on May 16 and 17, arrived here today on their way home.

The leader said he was "eminently satisfied" with the climb.

The peak, part of the Everest massif, was climbed on May 16 by Dennis Davis and Sherpa Tashi, and the next day by Chris Bonington, Leslie Brown, Jim Swallow and Sherpa Pema.

Mr Walmsley said the climbers had tackled a central ridge which went half way up the southern face of the peak.

He said Sir John Hunt, leader of the 1953 Everest expedition, had recommended the main southern ridge of Nuptse, but this was very long and a close examination showed that it did not lead to the summit.

Over 6,000 feet of rope was used to cross the main hurdle on the climb, a ridge between camp three and four. This included areas of hanging ice pillars, thin ice cones and ice tunnels.

The expedition's camp six, Mr Walmsley said, was below a hanging glacier.

"Luckily it never came down to us, but on May 24 it roared down and obliterated some of the route up," he added.—Reuter.

OAS group sets off on mission

Washington, June 7.
The Organisation of American States (OAS) today sent a four-nation mission to the Dominican Republic for a fact-finding tour.

With Dominican Republic agreement, the mission is to look into the situation caused by the assassination of Dictator Rafael Trujillo.

The special investigating committee is composed of representatives of the United States, Panama, Colombia and Uruguay. It was expected to begin talks with Dominican officials immediately after its arrival. The mission will stay in the Dominican Republic for an undetermined period.

THE SANCTIONS

The special mission will try to determine whether the recent assassination of Trujillo has altered the island's political situation enough to warrant OAS action.

Specifically, the mission will consider the possibility of modifying the economic sanctions applied by the OAS against the Trujillo regime last year.

The investigating team was sent at the request of the United States in the wake of Trujillo's assassination.—UPI.

The leader said he was "eminently satisfied" with the climb.

The peak, part of the Everest massif, was climbed on May 16 by Dennis Davis and Sherpa Tashi, and the next day by Chris Bonington, Leslie Brown, Jim Swallow and Sherpa Pema.

Mr Walmsley said the climbers had tackled a central ridge which went half way up the southern face of the peak.

He said Sir John Hunt, leader of the 1953 Everest expedition, had recommended the main southern ridge of Nuptse, but this was very long and a close examination showed that it did not lead to the summit.

Over 6,000 feet of rope was used to cross the main hurdle on the climb, a ridge between camp three and four. This included areas of hanging ice pillars, thin ice cones and ice tunnels.

The expedition's camp six, Mr Walmsley said, was below a hanging glacier.

"Luckily it never came down to us, but on May 24 it roared down and obliterated some of the route up," he added.—Reuter.

Congo soon getting aid

Leopoldville, June 7.
Philippe De Seynes, a senior United Nations finance expert, left for New York tonight after a day of consultations with Congolese leaders for the granting of UN aid to the Congo.

He said he hoped financial aid to ease the Congo's desperate economic position would start flowing as early as next week.

It was disclosed at a news conference that the Congo's public debt now stood at 60,000 million Congolese francs (about US$1,200 million).—UPI.

Tony opens antique fair in West End

London, June 7.
Mr Antony Armstrong-Jones, deputising for the first time for his wife Princess Margaret, today opened the Antique Dealers' Fair in fashionable Park Lane, heart of London's West End.

"Up till now for the 21 years that the fair has been in existence, the date finalisation for antiques has been 1938," he said.

"Sooner or later this must be advanced and presumably the date will eventually be 1961. In which case we must endeavour to see that things made nowadays, whether mass produced or not, are as well designed and constructed as "There is always room for both antiques and modern art in every society so long as both are the best examples of their time," Mr Armstrong-Jones said.

"Good of any age will stand together and will be mutually complimentary."—China Mail Special.

Bechuanaland border being fenced off

Johannesburg, June 7.
South Africa is erecting a wire fence along its 1,000-mile border with the British Protectorate of Bechuanaland, the Afrikaans language Dio Vodrand reported here today.

"Some hundred miles have already been fenced off," it said.

First aim of the fencing is to control foot-and-mouth disease, but the Government is also considering military patrolling of the border and roads are being cleared alongside the fence for this purpose, it added. The Vodrand said plans were under way for setting up customs posts along the Bechuanaland border.

Bechuanaland is divided from South Africa by two rivers, which can be crossed at practically any point when the water level drops. There are also many unsupervised footbridges.

(For some time, police have been patrolling South Africa's borders with the British Protectorates of Basutoland and Swaziland).—Reuter.

Inquiry into work stoppages

London, June 7.
A working party is to be set up to try to find a solution to the frequent work stoppages in Britain's docks and to see how the present method of employing casual labour can be changed, it was announced here yesterday.

The decision was made at a special meeting of the national joint council for the port transport industry, which had been called at the suggestion of the Minister of Labour, Mr John Hart, following the last dispute in the London docks.—China Mail Special.

London.
A jury in a house-breaking case was lectured from the Bench when it returned after 45 minutes to ask if police found fingerprints on the premises.

Fingerprints were not mentioned in the trial.

Said Mr Ewen Montagu, Q.C., chairman of Middlesex Sessions:

"Well, really, members of the jury, this is too much television.

RETRIAL

"The times fingerprints are found are one in a million. A fingerprint can only be found if a man places his finger firmly on a smooth surface without sliding it."

"And ninety-nine times out of a hundred even if there is a smooth surface there are only finger marks—not fingerprints."

The jury retired for another 35 minutes but was unable to agree on a verdict.

A retrial was ordered and Frederick Joseph Garner, aged 19, of High-street, Northwood, accused of breaking into a house with intent to steal, was remanded in custody.

'Seeing eye'
Dell does a good job

Dell sits quietly beside Miss Fraser in the air-craft before leaving Sydney.

The first "seeing eye" dog ever to be exported from Australia flew from Perth to Auckland via Sydney recently, a distance of 3,500 miles, and as a first class passenger. Dell, an 18 month old Labrador bitch travelled by the side of her blind mistress Miss Jean Fraser of Auckland.

Airline officials in Sydney described her as a "perfect passenger", leading Miss Fraser across the tarmac and pausing ## with Britain and other countries in the Commonwealth.

The idea originally started in Australia when it was known as Apprenticeship week. This so impressed the Duke of Edinburgh who witnessed the activities while on a visit here, that he called a conference at Buckingham Palace in May 1950 to consider holding a similar week simultaneously in all countries of the British Commonwealth. The Conference finally decided to endorse the proposal to publicize the whole field of technical training.

The aims of the week generally are to stress the importance of responsibility and training both for the benefit of individual firms and in the interest of young people, and to give increased opportunity to young people both in the fields of education and training and to emphasise the place of the young worker in society.

A party of Northumberland Fusiliers arrived in Sydney recently from Hong Kong to seek adventure in mountain climbing. They are stationed in Hong Kong where they formed their mountaineering club as a hobby, and the Outward Bound movement here arranged the soldiers' trip to Australia.

They spent some time at Rundwick Australian Army Depot deciding the site of their first expedition and then left for Nowra which is on the Shoalhaven River and from here they will climb one of the peaks of the Gourrock Range. After two weeks they will explore the ranges around Canberra, and from there to the Blue Mountains of Katoomba.

All are enjoying their visit to Australia, and expect to return to Hong Kong in five weeks' time.

The Sheep Show opened in Sydney this week where 2,800 sheep and 300 sheepdogs will be on view to the public at the Show-ground.

This year the show will be the most memorable yet held as both the scientific and pastoral sides of the work will be on display. This is the first time these bodies have co-ordinated. Sheep, which are valued at around half a million pounds have been arriving daily by air and land, and the most valuable sheep to arrive came from Haddon Rig Stud at Warren, with sheep worth more than £150,000. The Australian Meat Board will also display carcasses of meat and an exhibit showing the packaging of meat.

THE theft of 145,500 sand-

shows a certain ingenuity on someone's part.

The easiest way to steal them
would be to come day after day

The answer to any questions asked should be, "Oh, I'm the man

London, June 7. A revival of the roguish idea of false leg muscles for men is suggested by the Tailor and Cutter, an authority on men's fashion in clothing.

"Now that trousers are following the curve of the leg, the male equivalent of a girl's fashions should have every chance of revival," the journal said.

It went on: "Lack of muscular development never discouraged the Prince Regent (1762-1820) from displaying himself in the tight breeches of his time."

"In those days you could have a 'body like mine' in a lot less than seven days."

"False calves were strapped on to a leg that required their assistance as readily as false shoulders are today."

"Indeed, the idea of the false leg muscle might well be revived now that the era of the golden cuff is making a fortune out of tight trousers."

LIVE FIRING OF ATOMIC ARMS

Warminster, June 7. The biggest all-services exercise since World War II started today on Salisbury Plain, Britain's major military training ground.

George Medal for brigadier who rescued girl in Malta

London, June 7. Brigadier Norman James Dickson, aged 49, now commanding British forces in Libya and Tripolitania, has been awarded the George Medal for rescuing a small girl and a Royal Air Force sergeant in heavy seas off Malta.

The citation in the London Gazette said that the Brigadier was on a crowded beach in Malta last July when he rescued a girl being carried out to sea by a strong undercurrent.

He was gashed by rocks, dislocated a finger and broke a toe. A few minutes later, though exhausted, he dived ten feet into the water again on seeing that a sergeant, one of the men who had first attempted a rescue, was in difficulties and calling for help.

The sergeant, who lost consciousness, was brought ashore with help but later died. As medical assistance arrived, Brigadier Dickson himself became unconscious.

Married with three children, Brigadier Dickson won the Distinguished Service Order in Holland in 1944.—China Mail Special.

Driver inhaled chewing gum before crash

London. Roy Bloxam, racing driver killed on the Goodwood motor race circuit near Chichester, Sussex, on May 22, had inhaled a piece of chewing gum, a pathologist told an inquest here.

A verdict of death by misadventure was recorded on Bloxam, a 35-year-old garage proprietor.

The pathologist, Dr D. P. King, said death resulted from severe internal injuries and burns. He commented: "It is unusual for anyone engaged in a fairly violent sport like car racing or football to chew gum. An official observer, Commander R. Torrey, said that he saw Mr Bloxam's car rounding a bend at 110 to 115 miles an hour.

The rear of the car swung round and it ran broadside along the track for 150 feet before hitting a sandbank and concrete barrier.

The car and driver were flung separately about eight feet into the air.—China Mail Special.

UK told to make bold use of new techniques

London, June 7. Sir Roger Makins, Chairman of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority, and a former British ambassador in Washington, told leaders of British industry today that they must make bold use of new techniques if industry was to have efficient increased production.

The 27-foot long Honest John was to be destroyed in flight after about a quarter of its 10-mile range.

Observers, numbering about 2,500 each day, included officers and cadets of the three services, members of government departments, Commonwealth liaison staffs and foreign attaches.

Such a mass of material had not been brought together before in Britain in peace time. It was said to be considerably in advance of anything previously shown.—China Mail Special.

Sir Laurence, wife sail for London

New York, June 7. Sir Laurence Olivier and his wife, British actress Joan Plowright, sailed for London today on the liner Queen Elizabeth.

The actor and his wife, who were married last March 17 at Wilton, Connecticut, have been appearing in separate Broadway plays.

Their names were not on the Queen Elizabeth passenger list and they evaded newsmen after boarding the ship. Mrs Olivier, who was wearing what appeared to be a maternity dress, declined to pose for photographs.—AP.

'Adoption of family planning would be a greater revolution'

London, June 7. The adoption of family planning throughout the world would be a revolution with more far-reaching effects upon the pattern of human culture than the discovery of atomic energy, a family planning expert said here.

Sir Russell Brain, President of the Family Planning Association, said such a revolution would emerge when people wherever they live in the world, have children only when they wish.

He told a press conference at the Association's annual general meeting here that 25 new family planning clinics had been opened in Britain last year, making the total 340 — about double the number six years ago.

RIGHT ADVICE

There was a constant demand throughout the country for more clinics. The Association had in the past been "pioneers" in the rapidly developing and growing knowledge of non-mechanical methods of contraception.

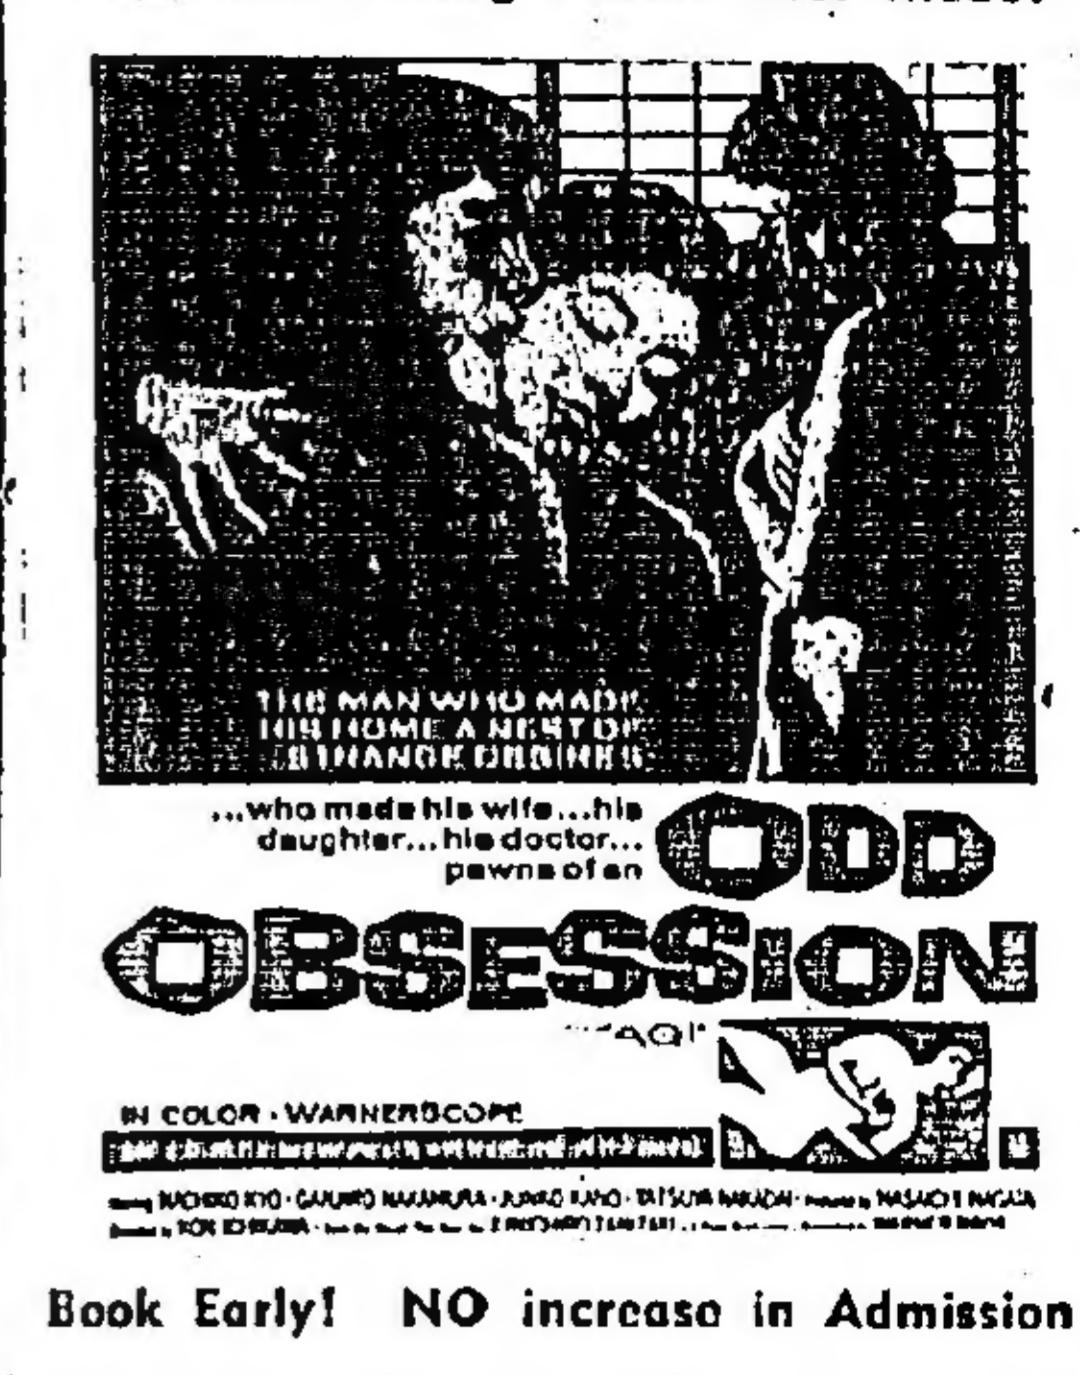

It was incumbent on the medical element of the Association to get the kind of advice in order to ensure they remained in the lead as new methods were discovered and became available for use, he added.

Delegates from 17 countries attended the two-day conference.—China Mail Special.

Margaret's Baby

No title unless the Queen acts

BY CYRIL HANKINSON
EDITOR OF DEBRETT

ALTHOUGH fifth in the line of succession to the Throne, Princess Margaret's baby will be plain Master or Miss Armstrong-Jones—unless the Queen makes Tony Armstrong-Jones a peer of high degree, or confers some special style upon the infant itself.

Since the edict of King George V in 1917, Princesses have not transmitted any titles to their children. It is understood that until very shortly before the birth of the Prince of Wales, the fact that any baby born to the Queen (then Princess Elizabeth) would not be a Prince or Princess but would take the normal titles of a child of an ordinary duke was overlooked.

As speedily as possible the matter was dealt with by letters patent declaring that the children of Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh should hold and enjoy the style and attribute of Royal Highness and the titular dignity of prince or princess.

PREVIOUSLY there had been of course the case of the Princess Royal, who married the Earl of Harrowood, but as she had four brothers it was not deemed necessary that her children should be given any royal style.

At the time of his marriage it was said that Mr Armstrong-Jones did not wish to accept a peerage. However, now that Princess Margaret is expecting a baby, he might possibly change his view.

Should he do so, one imagines that the title bestowed upon him would not be less than that of marquis. Otherwise the younger sons would only be the Hon. (general form of address "Mr") whereas sons and daughters of a duke or marquis would be lord and lady, which would be more in keeping.

If Mr Armstrong-Jones continues to be averse to a title, then the Queen could still follow the example of her father by issuing letters patent, bestowing upon Princess Margaret's children the style and precedence of, say, the sons and daughters of a duke or marquis.

NO ONE can say what the Queen will do, but I have been unable to discover any princess of Great Britain whose children had no title or precedence.

Last year's declaration by the Queen that any of her descendants who should require a surname should have that of Mountbatten-Windsor does not apply to the children of her sister.

People of the pink twilight...

IT takes 90 hours and costs £7 5s to earn Russian. It takes 18 hours and costs £17 15s to learn to drive a car.

It takes 67 hours and costs £100 to be in a court report the other day—£100 to learn to dance well enough for a bronze medal.

But then, the London Dance Institute—which successfully sued a man because he had not paid for his lessons—does offer so much more than the Polylechic or a driving school. Especially if you're lonely, or shy, or plain.

It gives you glamour and gracious living and friends—at a price. The glass swing doors of the Institute in Oxford-street allow an intriguing promise of low lights and soft music.

The inside doesn't let you down. It's all pink shaded lights, and dark wallpaper, and comfortable easy chairs.

And teachers and students are as well-scrubbed and wholesome as the children at an infants' dancing class.

The dance instructor is bright and pretty, with a neat way with a cha-cha-cha, and an enrolment form.

isn't called the Little Ballroom, it's called the Carousel.

The bronze, silver, and gold medals are awarded by the institute's own dance director, and don't mean much outside the school.

It is not only an award," Mr Douglas Graham, who is assistant to the principal, explained. "It is something you have nobody can take away from you." This is real dream-world dancing-world talk.

Personality

It is the aura of unreality that makes this pink twilight under Oxford-street so successful. It is the reason why dozens of people sign on again and again for more and more lessons so that they don't have to give up the classiest club they'll ever know. One family of five has been coming for two years.

Any one who has taken our bronze medal is welcome back to the institute to join in the group dancing and the weekly events for a year afterwards," said Mr Graham, a handsome Canadian who used to be an instructor.

People come here for more than just the dancing, you know. They come for the social life. Students sometimes are so shy that they can't say "well" to anyone. Within a few weeks they've come out. They are personality people. Real personality people."

Mr Graham offered me a basic course. But £2 a week seemed to me an awful lot of money for the pleasure of a dance.

Even with the added incentive bonus of becoming a Personality Person.

SHY MEN WITH NIMBLE FINGERS

TO the men in Reading and the surrounding country-side who do needlework secretly at home—and, apparently, there are lots of them—this appeal is being made: "Don't be shy. Let the public see your work."

The 150 ladies of the Berkshire branch of the Embroiderers' Guild and the four men members of the branch are ready to welcome the future enthusiasts with open arms.

"I know there are lots of men here who do needlework at home," said Major F. G. Strange, formerly of the Royal Engineers, one of the four, at his home in Kidmore-road, Caversham Heights.

"At our exhibitions of work they have walked round with their wives and I've heard them whispering: 'I can do that....'

Tapestries

"Yes, they do it—secretly at home. There are hundreds of men, for example, doing tapestry and carpet work. But they are too shy to come out into the open."

Major Strange—he is an old boy of the Royal School of Needlework, which is h re-created with elegance and which he is hoping to keep open—has been doing all types of embroidery for 20 years. He specializes in church work.

"I watched my wife and so became interested in it," he said, "and I joined the School in 1948 while stationed in London."

Occupying a proud position on his sitting room wall is an embroidered Nativity scene, 32in. by 12in., which took him 15 months' sparetime work—the longest he has taken on one piece.

This 'exile' could be another Mitford

Lisbon. WHILE football fever has been rising here in Lisbon's hot streets and while Portugal's rich society women have been making long charity appeals on television for the white refugees from Angola, I have been looking into the story of a refugee from British society.

The connection with the Book Page? Just this:

A book by a remarkable new novelist will be published in Britain. Its title: THE ADONIS GARDEN (Byre and Spottiswoode, 16s.). Its author now lives in the hills beyond Lisbon. Her name—Daphne Fielding.

If you have been a life-long follower of the society columns, what a peal of associations that name will set tingling. You will know that, as the lovely, gay-mouthed Hon. Daphne Vivian, she was one of the brightest of the bright young unmarried things in the 1920's. You will also know that she then married one of the biggest catchers of the time—dashing, broken-nosed Henry, heir to the Marquess of Bath.

Her husband, who was then a small child, leaving a note to say that he had gone to Australia. She heard nothing of him for two years, and then discovered through a defective agency that he had been living all the time with a woman, by whom he had a child in a flat close to the Albert Hall. He eventually died of drink, but not before distinguishing himself by taking off all his clothes in a crowded tube train....

Then there was Daphne herself, sweeping like a flame through the maddest wartime parties. As a young married couple (they had already been secretly married for a year when the full-dress ceremony took place) she and Henry went bear-hunting with Longleat. The rocky approach course. She is very good looking.

the Duke of Westminster and on luxurious cruises with Lord Beaverbrook.

WONDERFUL

Once, returning to Lord Beaverbrook's yacht in the Seine, Daphne said how wonderful it had been to drink vin rose ashore after the unchanging supply of champagne afloat. Months later at a Beaverbrook party in London she found that whereas every other guest had champagne, a bottle of vin rose stood at her place at the table.

BOOKS by ROBERT PITMAN

Such were the things about Daphne's luxurious first life that I read above the clouds in the Comet.

What of her second life?

In the bar of my Lisbon hotel I was met by a strikingly handsome middle-aged couple. They were the Fieldings. In their little Continental car they took me off into the hills at Gargaria speed.

As I clutched white-faced at the car sides, Daphne Fielding told me about their house. "It's a Hansel and Gretel cottage," she shouted. "No electricity. Just oil lamps."

It sounded very different from Longleat. The rocky approach course. She is very good looking.

"I designed their dress myself," said their mistress. "Poor dear, they will work so hard."

There are three of them working for us indoors—with two men in the garden. Their total bill for wages is just £10 a week."

A BOLTER

We moved into the hot sun. Slipping at cold mint tea, Daphne Fielding talked about her mother. "Of course, she was really a bolter-like the girl in the Mitford novel. Always bolting from one trap to another. But her last marriage has been wonderfully happy. It's lasted nearly 35 years." Her Alsatian, you know. And years younger than her, like Xan with me."

Near her in the garden a tame parrot chattered in Portuguese. Suddenly it looked at me and spoke into startling English. Using a vernacular phrase, it told me to go away. Its owner laughed: "It's such a lovely bird sometimes when we have lingering guests. Recently it flew round the valley shouting the same thing at the Portuguese. Fortunately the poor things didn't know English."

I asked her if she had met any of the royal exiles in Estoril. The parrot squawked its only English phrase at me again. Mrs. Fielding said: "I have met Madam Luperci. She calls herself Princess Helena, of course. She is very good looking."

She patted her writing desk. "I remember Max Beaverbrook teaching me to write in the twenties. He was my guru. Henry didn't like me writing articles, although he adored Max. Max would keep growling at me: 'More imagery, more imagery.' I still hear his voice as I start work each morning."

And the result of all this work? I believe that The Adonis Garden could easily have success on the Mitford scale. Since it does not appear till next week I cannot review it here. But the publishers in their blurb describe it thus:

"In a sunlit corner of Spain a group of highly unconventional people are hotly engaged in love affairs, intrigues, and occasional hostilities...."

The publishers mention a drug party in Tangier ("Yes, that took place all right," Daphne Fielding told me); they mention a beautiful American girl who repeatedly strips to the waist. ("She's almost an exact copy. We know one who keeps madly stripping.")

THE REVERSE

From the tone of the blurb I suspect that some reviewers may be led to denounce the book as an out-of-time return to the lot-a-bo-naughty mood of the 'twenties. But is that the real point of the book?

"No, just the reverse," Daphne Fielding told me. "You see, I pity these poor middle-aged expatriates who try to be so gay. It's so sad, sad."

But I should say that the new, determined, professional Daphne Fielding who told me that has never been happier in her whole fantastic life.

Reports on a play-it-down fashion trend that is dominating France

FROM PARIS—ON THE CHEAP

LATEST in lounging pyjamas—dark-shade cotton poplin or silk. In green, prune and navy. Price about £2.10s.

IN Paris it's chic to be simple. The dresses ordered by the wives of French Cabinet Ministers and diplomats for recent visits of Belgium's Queen Fabiola and Jackie Kennedy are the simplest in the Dior, Laroche, Maggy Rouff and Nina Ricci collections.

This play-it-down trend is echoed right down the fashion line. Shops in the elegant Faubourg St Honore are full of summer daytime dresses in workhouse grey and black-striped silks; in dark green, prune black or navy heavy cottons; in small black-on-grey "Granny" prints. Styles are simple—sleeveless, collarless, shapeless, with tie belts round the hips.

The big stores stress the heavy workmen's dungaree look in holiday pants, and skirts; farm labourers' jackets in tough sailcloth fabric go with them; blouses are simple cotton shirts, with rolled-up sleeves and gaping necks.

Setting the fashionable women-in-the-street line are the French chain-store clothes. All the garments pictured are in—or will be in—300 shops throughout France between now and the autumn. They are aimed at the "average woman" who wants high fashion at a low price. They are worn by everyone who can get to the shop in time to prise one of the limited number of each edition off the rails and make it hers.

If South had really been on his toes he would have gone right up with the ace of hearts on the first lead. Then he would have led a club to his king; cashed his ace of diamonds; ruffed his king of diamonds in dummy and discarded his three remaining hearts on dummy's good clubs.

Of course, this would be right lucky. Clubs do not figure to break 4-4, but when West opened in heart against the spade slam it was almost certain that hearts would not break 2-2.

The Musical Forest

—Baron Munch Tells Shadows All About It—

By MAX TRELL

"WELL, my friends," said Baron Munch as he sat under a shady tree in his pleasant garden, "I used to play the violin very well. But one day it ran away with the bow. It's a very curious story, and if you're not too busy with other things this sunny afternoon, I'll be delighted to tell it to you both."

Baron Munch stopped to smile at Knarf and Handi, the Shadow Children with the Turned About Names who were sitting on the grass beside him. A few minutes before, Handi had asked Baron Munch if he could play any music.

"We love music," she had told him.

"But, Baron Munch," said Knarf, "how could a violin run away? And how could a bow run away?"

"I know it's hard to believe," agreed Baron Munch. "But they did."

Then he smiled and began his story.

"It was about ten years ago, my dear Children," said Baron Munch, "that I decided to visit an old friend of mine, His name was Prince Fiddlestick and he had a delightful house in a tiny village, at the foot of a mountain."

Overjoyed by visit

"He was overjoyed to see me, for he lived alone, and he was even more pleased when he noticed that I had brought my violin with me. Like me, my darling Handi and my dear Knarf, the Prince, loved music.

"But," continued Baron Munch, "the Prince warned me about taking my violin and my bow out of the case in which I had brought them. In some surprise why he had told me such a curious thing, he told me that the villagers had often spoken to him about a musical forest halfway up the mountain. This forest, according to the tale of the villagers, was made up of musical instruments that had run away from their masters."

"Of course I didn't believe a word of this nonsense, and told my friend, the Prince, no."

A bow and violin went racing into the forest.

were shaped like trumpets and bugles. One enormous tree that had fallen over was shaped like a grand piano. And over to one side were two great groves of birch trees shaped like violins.

Karf and Handi looked at Baron Munch with wide-open eyes. But he hurried on with the rest of his story before they could interrupt him.

Thailand earned the right to meet Indonesia, the holders, in the challenge round of the Thomas Cup International Badminton Competition when they beat Denmark in the inter-zone final here today by seven matches to two.

Bus carrying cricketers catches fire

Eastbourne, June 7. Players and officials of the Young South African cricket team now touring Britain were aboard a motor bus which caught fire near Beachy Head today. The coach was severely damaged but no one was hurt.

As it reached the headland smoke belched from the engine compartment. Moments later flames shot out. Several of the 19 players and officials smashed the rear windows to get out. They threw out their baggage before leaping to safety.

The team, consisting of promising young South African cricketers, mainly from the Provinces, is led by Springbok Roy McLean, one of the five cricketers of the year nominated by Wisden this year.—AP.

After gaining a 3-1 lead yesterday, Thailand's young men Channarong Rotanangsang easily beat Denmark's Erland Kops in the first singles match today 15-1, 15-11 in 31 minutes, to gain his country's fourth point.

In the next match of the evening 21-year-old University student Narong Bhoonchum clinched the victory for Thailand by beating Denmark's No. 3 Knud Nielsen 15-9, 15-11. This gave Thailand their winning fifth point in the nine-match Inter-Zone Final.

The brilliant young Thai players will take on Indonesia on Friday and Saturday nights in the Kebajoran Sports Hall here in Djakarta.—AFP.

Palmer favoured over Player in the U.S. Open

New York, June 7. Sports Illustrated, America's weekly sports magazine, predicts Arnold Palmer will prevail over South African Guy Player in the US Open Golf Tournament starting 15.

The magazine makes this appraisal:

"Palmer, as everyone knows by now, is the most aggressive and daring player in tournament golf. Such a competitor must necessarily be wild at times, and Palmer certainly is, but he proved last year at Cherry Hills (Denver, Colorado site of the 1960 Open) that tight fairways and heavy rough—the hallmark of every course on which the open is played—are not enough to stop him when he is playing well."

"Oakland Hills in Birmingham, Michigan, will never intimidate him, for no course ever has done so. If he is at the top of his game, as he has been so often throughout the winter and spring, Palmer will win it. That's all there is to that."

PUTTING TROUBLE

"Ever since his victory at the Masters, Player has been having putting trouble, particularly on the short puts. In tournament after tournament he could be seen on the practice green, long after he had finished his round, putting hundreds of balls at a hole from three to four feet out."

"He tried switching from the mid-hand putter he had used all winter and at the Masters to a blade, but still he wasn't entirely satisfied. Otherwise he was hitting the ball as well as ever."

"His full assortment of shots and the thoughtful way he plays them are bound to make Player a formidable contender on a course as difficult as Oakland Hills. But he will have to have full confidence in his putter on those hilly greens."—AP.

Cricket 'throwing truce' ends

London, June 7. The "throwing truce" agreed between the MCC and Australia on November 3, 1960, ended today.

Under the "truce," which applied from the start of the current season, umpires in County matches had to report to Lord's any bowler whose action was considered doubtful. Mr. Ronnie Aird, the MCC Secretary, said today that only one bowler had been reported.

In the case of the one bowler reported, Mr. Aird's statement said that "the county has been informed." This makes it clear that he was a bowler of one of the English counties, and so all the Australian bowlers have satisfied the umpires in the 11 matches which the tourists have played so far.

The bowler who was reported was Harold Rhodes, the Derbyshire fast bowler. Major Douglas Carr, the Derbyshire Assistant Secretary, said Rhodes had been reported, adding that the county had not yet decided what action they would take.

Rhodes was no-balled six times for throwing when playing against the South Africans at Derby last summer.—China Mail Special.

Stirling Moss will drive a Ferrari in the Le Mans

Le Mans, June 7. Stirling Moss the British ace driver, will make a bid to win the classic 24-hour Le Mans sports car race in a three litre Ferrari it was learned here today.

Moss will drive a 12-cylinder 2,953 cc sports racing Ferrari with another famed British driver Graham Hill.

This combination of top British drivers in the favored Italian team Scuderia Ferrari who last year won the race indicates that old international rivalries have been forgotten in a concerted bid to win the world's most famous sports car contest.

The last practice laps were begun today under a stormy sky. Entries had been limited to 55 cars, but there were five reserves in case anyone should fail to comply with the regulations.

Only one car—the Lotus Number 61 which has been strongly favoured for the index of performance and index of thermal efficiency prizes—failed to be present. It has not yet been accounted for by the competitors.

Moss's chief rival was considered to be France's Maurice Trintignant, with the Italian co-driver, Alberto Ascari, driving a similar Ferrari, who did not show up for today's practice laps.

As always, there was a strong French bid for the index of performance prize—last year won by DB-Panhard—from the only French competitor, who has entered six rear-engined vehicles based on the popular family model, the Renault Dauphine.

The American veteran Briggs Cunningham has entered a team of specially-modified Maseratis, but was having trouble over complying with the refueling regulations, which as usual, are complicated that even competitors fear miscalculations.—AP.

Freddie Gilroy goes down to the canvas while defending his European Bantamweight title recently. Standing over him is the victor, Piero Cossomay.

O'Neill, Dexter, Illingworth may be fit for first Test

London, June 7. Norman O'Neill, the talented Australian batsman, is regarded as certain to play against England in the first Test at Edgbaston tomorrow, Thursday.

With Alan Davidson bowling and Test selectors watching closely, O'Neill batted beautifully for a half an hour today.

There was no trace of inconvenience from the tendon in his left knee which he damaged when fielding at Hove (Sussex) last Saturday.

O'Neill finished his trial by sprinting up and down the pitch and turning quickly between each run. Thereupon Benaud wasted no time in announcing: "O'Neill has passed his test and he will be in the eleven providing he feels no ill effects in the morning."

Main question

England players were also in action at the same time. The two invalids, Ted Dexter and Ray Illingworth, appeared to be fit, though Dexter, in his short spell of bowling, did not attempt anything strenuous.

Colin Cowdrey, the England captain said: "I shall wait and see how Dexter feels in the morning. I do not expect to name the final side until after ten o'clock tomorrow".

The main question seems to be whether England can afford to enter this match with only two pace bowlers, Statham and Truman, who will compete along with Singh in the Grand Prix of Paris meeting this Saturday and Sunday, were present.—AP.

England have never lost a Test at Edgbaston. They have won four and drawn three. In the first match there in 1902 England dismissed Australia on a rain-affected pitch for their lowest Test total, 36. George Hart, three for 15, did the damage.

The teams

The teams for tomorrow's first Test are:

England: (from) M. C. Cowdry (Capt.) (Kent), D. A. Allen (Gloucestershire), K. F. Barlow (Surrey), E. R. Dexter (Sussex), J. H. Edrich (Surrey), R. Illingworth (Yorkshire), R. J. Knight (Essex), J. T. Murray (Middlesex), G. Pullar (Lancashire), M. J. K. Smith (Warwickshire), S. Statham (Northamptonshire), J. Trueman (Yorkshire).

DENTAL TREATMENT FOR POOR CHILDREN

836 treated in five months

By JILL DOGGETT

Many of Hongkong's underprivileged children are receiving dental treatment through the voluntary services of two dental surgeons and St John Brigade nurses and Brigade cadets.

At weekends people passing along Garden-road may notice a brilliant light shining in one of the upper windows of the St John's Ambulance Headquarters. This lamp is part of up-to-date equipment used regularly in the work of helping to preserve the teeth of children who have suffered from malnutrition.

Within the first five months of this year, 836 poor children have received treatment at the hands of the voluntary teams. Last Saturday the lamp shone on 22 little faces from the Po Leung Kuk Orphanage. On previous weekends, it illuminated the faces of youngsters with blind eyes or crippled limbs.

DENTAL TEAM

Before the small patients are brought to the Headquarters' clinic, they are examined in their own institutions by the dental team who take along two portable dental chairs. Arrangements are then made for those requiring treatment to be brought to the Clinic for fillings or extractions or both. For badly crippled children stretchers are provided.

During one afternoon at the Po Leung Kuk, the team examined 397 children and prepared a similar number of cards. Of these, 173 children were found to need extensive treatment. One little girl had 11 cavities.

"Within a year, she would have lost all these teeth without immediate treatment" the dental said.

Governor visits Tsun Wan

The Governor, Sir Robert Black, visited Tsun Wan this morning to view developments in this growing industrial town.

Travelling by launch, Sir

Robert first went to Gin Drinker's Bay, where he discussed the Kowloon-Chai Wan Development scheme with the Director of Public Works and the District Commissioner, New Territories.

Work will shortly start on this major reclamation project, which is designed to provide some 400 acres of land for new urban development.

In Tsun Wan, the Governor visited a number of vantage points from which to observe the progress being made with reclamation and other public works as well as the extent and pace of new private development.

AND MUSIC

Leaning back in the dental chair, no squeals are uttered. There is no background music. There is no transistor radio and the purr of a jet drill. The only moment of real distress came when a little blind girl thought she had bitten the surgeon's finger and clasped it with a cry of anguish.

Police disclose quick arrests after robbery

Police arrested three men within eight hours of an early morning robbery in Stubbs-road on May 15, the Victoria District Court was told this morning.

Before Judge B. J. Jennings, three young men pleaded not guilty to a charge of robbing first accused and an unknown man, in Gloucester-road and Marsh-road. The unknown man escaped, but on the first accused was found another man's driving licence. Inspector Apps said. He was taken to the Police Station for questioning and subsequently cautioned in respect of the robbery.

Four hours later, the police arrested the second accused in Fleming-street near Lockhart-road. Inspector Apps went on. On him was found a pendant, which was later identified as one of the items stolen in the robbery.

At 11.06 am, the third accused was arrested in Hennessy-road, and subsequently made a cautioned statement to the police, Inspector Apps said.

APPROACHED

Four men approached them in another car, Inspector Apps said. They robbed the complainants of jewellery, a watch, the car ignition keys and some cash.

Before they left, Inspector Apps said, one of them also punctured the tyres of complainants' car.

Two triad members sent to jail

Two triad men were sent to jail for one year and ordered to be placed under police supervision for two years by Mr T. L. Yang at Causeway Bay Magistracy this morning.

The first, Tsang Sun, a 39-year-old painter, of 198 Shaukiwan-road, second floor, was sentenced for being a triad "fighter".

Insp G. D. Carter, prosecuting, said the defendant was arrested yesterday morning by detective officers at Shaukiwan-road near Tai Cheung-street.

The defendant was employed as a painter by the Taikuo Dockyard at $8 a day. He was married and had two children.

Insp Carter said the defendant joined the society in 1936 and in the following year was promoted to the rank of fighter.

Insp G. D. Carter, prosecuting, said that the Wo To Yee triad society was very active in Quarry Bay, Sai Wan Ho and Shaukiwan areas, "protecting prostitutes, operating gambling houses and collecting money from hawkers as protection fees."

Insp Carter added that the defendant had four previous convictions, all for drug offences.

The other triad member, Li Fan-yuen, a 34-year-old newspaper hawker, of 170 Wanchai-road, third floor, was sentenced for being an "adviser" of the Tung Sun Wo triad society.

Dept Insp Charles Lee said the defendant was arrested by detectives in Eastern District yesterday morning on information.

He said the defendant joined the society in 1947 and had paid $10.60 as entrance fee. In July the following year he went to Macao for a big triad ceremony and was promoted to his present rank.

Insp Lee told Mr Yang that the Tung Sun Wo triad society was very active and powerful in Eastern Districts.

He added that the defendant had three previous drug convictions.
